

Our Flat Stanley Project

Hello Dear Parent(s).

You may or may not be aware that we have read the book called Flat Stanley in class. It's about a boy named Stanley who got flattened by a bulletin board that fell on him in the middle of night. He was then sent to California to visit a friend in a big brown envelope! We are creating our own Flat Self in class and would like to send it to relatives or friends who live in other parts of our country.

Your child will write a letter which will include a brief summary of the story as well as what the project is about. We are asking that the recipient take their flat person wherever they go, take pictures and perhaps include any informative pamphlets or brochures of any cool places they see and do. Your son/daughter is to include a journal, which we will start in class, so the recipient can add little write-ups about their outings they shared with Flat Person.

Please discuss to whom your child could/would like to send this project to, and contact that person to give them a heads-up and get the OK. Upon their safe return, we would like each of our Flat People to have fun adventures to talk about and to share souvenirs, maps, notes, pictures, postcards, or anything else they picked up along their way together.

Have your child write down the mailing address in their agenda so we can send their envelope from the school.

Thank you for your time and help on this project. We couldn't do this project without you.

Sincerely,

Madame Danielle =D
